**The Food Hack is an innovation competition where large and small food producers, food entrepreneurs, researchers/students and other people with a food interest/profession come together to hack food challenges in the spirit of open innovation. It is also an international event that builds a community, which makes the hack a neutral venue where large and small companies can come together to create solutions to challenges related to food production and consumption. This year's Food Hack will explore the opportunities of data to enable better decision-making, advance business, product and partnership models and empower stakeholders across the whole value chain. Data is an underutilized tool within the food and agriculture sector, if leveraged intentionally and inclusively data can have a crucial impact on the food system.*

Food Hack is an event within project PRIMÄR, which is co-financed by the European Regional Development Fund.
